He suffered a concussion and his condition grew steadily worse. Following an operation on Friday he was rushed to Montreal by special train. Further operations failed to relieve His Excellency and he passed away Sunday.

Lord Tweedsmuir will be buried in England.

OLD TIMERS' DANCE

The Carbon Old Timers Association sponsored a very successful dance on Monday, February 12th. A splendid program of music and old time dances had been arranged by the dance committee, W. Douglas, Jas. Gordon and Ross Thorburn, and the music was provided by Mrs. Trainor's Hill Billies.

Over 87-25, which gave a profit after all expenses were paid, of which $10.00 was donated to the four fund.

H.M. McNaughton was floor manager at the dance, and the president, Mr. C.H. Nash arranged a short and humorous programme during the supper hour.

HOUSE WARMING PARTY

A house warming party was held on Thursday, February 11th, at the home of Mrs. Bertram Charlebois. About 60 people sat down to a sumptuous turkey dinner and later in the evening a number of the young people of Carbon gathered around and dancing and games were enjoyed. Mr. Jas. THE WORLD OF WHEAT REVIEWED WEEKLY BY MAJOR H.G.I. STRANGE

The members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association are now holding their provincial meetings throughout Canada. The conferences in the West for the most part are over.

It was most inspiring, I thought, to see gathered together groups of quiet serious-minded earnest seed growers, who generally are but little known to the public, but who specialize in making available to their fellow farmers seeds of the most modern varieties of crops and most modern methods, and which seeds are true-to-type to an amazing high standard of excellence.

It was inspiring, too, I thought, to see these men listen patiently for long hours to the lectures and professional plant breeders, all in order that they might learn how to improve still further the high quality of the particular varieties with which they are working.

Canadian wheat, because of its high quality, deservedly commands a premium on world markets, a premium which is reflected in the price which producers in the price they receive for their grain. But how many people, even farmers, I wonder, realize that the extra price which they enjoy for the grain they produce is in a great measure the result of the painstaking work done by these quiet but most competent and conscientious partners of the scientific plant breeders—the members of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

Please allow me space in your paper to attend the ice carnival, on Friday last and enjoyed it very much. The leaders of each group of the C.C.F. were to be congratulated on the work they are doing among the young people of the town. The most striking scene at the carnival was little Miss McKibbin and Miss Harney when they were the central question of the parade and crown. Queen Ann looked very charming in her purple gown and crown.

That same afternoon I attended a party at the home of the four fund. I don't know how they know the right number. If you don't think it is correct, do your own guessing. The cutting back to the carnival, if I could blow a horn as well as my friend Bruce I would buy one so I could be heard all over town. At times I thought our starter was going to get an over, but being an active man he managed to escape being out of the picture.

If any one requires a trained nurse don't forget the one we have in town. You all know how well she looked after the infant she had in the carriage on the ice that evening.

Aunt Jennina looked very graceful no ladies, don't forget to buy her floor. R.R.T.

AUSTIN B. CLAYPOOL OUTLINES HIS POLICIES TO THE VOTING PUBLIC

Now Making Rounds of Bow River Riding

A. B. Claypool, Liberal candidate for the Bow River riding in the present Dominion election, who is well known throughout the riding through his long association with the activities of the United Farmers of Alberta, and as one of the outstanding members of the Alberta legislature from 1921 to 1935 is visiting every part of the Bow River riding, interviewing every possible elector and discussing the issues of the day, being easily approachable, he covers a lot of ground during each day of the campaign, while he is a firm advocate of the principle that, one who becomes a member of parliament or a legislature, he should represent all the people and do his utmost for all phases of industry in the riding.

His political record to date goes to show that Mr. Claypool's assistance and advice have been eagerly sought by all classes regardless of political parties.

Mr. Claypool when referring to his own political stand stated that when United Farmers of Alberta went into politics he was among the many who naturally re-aligned themselves to the political standpoint. In Alberta from 1921 to 1935 they had tried a great experiment, when the United Farmers of Alberta were the dominating political force in the province.

In 1921, the U.F.A. sent to Ottawa the clearest group of critics ever sent there, and while throughout the following years they commanded the respect of all Canada as critics, they were without the influence to obtain for Alberta these things vital to the progress and life of the province. After twenty years of observation of their efforts, Claypool has come to the conclusion that had these men associated with each other, the various major parties they would have with their ability and energy dominated the political policy of Canada.

For this very same reason, Mr. Claypool claims that while he is sympathetic to certain ideals of the C.C.F., the C.C.F. lacked the necessary leadership to get anything of any length of time and would never be of sufficient force to have any appreciable effect on the political policy of Canada.

When approached to run as Liberal candidate for the Bow River riding, Mr. Claypool considered things in the light of the facts he had already mentioned and accepted the nomination at a largely attended and thoroughly popular meeting.

Courage May Be Greater Factor In Winning The War Than Strategic Results

"It is a mechanized war, they say. 'Courage will not stop a tank, or halt a falling bomb, or resist a mine.' No. But courage is still a weapon. The one weapon without which the others are impotent. Consider what courage — human quality added to the mechanical equipment — has achieved already. Its psychological effect on the combatants and neutrals is likely to endure throughout the war, and to prove of greater importance than the strategic results.

The Navy, of course, claims the chief honors. Everyone must appreciate the immense courage shown by the three cruisers at Montevideo and by the two submarines in the North Sea, which inflicted such heavy damage on enemy warships in spite of the protection of mine fields and escorts of destroyers and aircraft.

Less sensational but no less remarkable is the courage of the mine sweepers. Without their courage, excitement, they carry out their desperately dangerous duties without cease.

The R.A.F. has also shown by engaging fighting aircraft with their bombers that success can be gained by skill and determination even when theoretically it could not be expected.

Another event has been the arrival of the first Canadian Division. Coupled with the news that Australian and New Zealand Divisions are ready to sail, this must make Hitler wonder whether the British Empire can really be in decay.

Apart from the sign of purpose it gives, the military value of Dominion assistance is very great. Those who realize that best are German soldiers who had to fight against British regular officers who were associated with Dominion troops in the First Great War.

Quick to learn, thorough in all their methods, and full of initiative and offensive spirit, Dominion troops had no superiors and few equals.

While still raw, the Canadians of 1914-18 came through the first gas attack and Australians and New Zealanders through the Aisne hard-riding in a manner that left no doubt as to their potentialities. Further experience made them the more formidable and at the end of the war they showed no signs of exhaustion.

Many ask what is the meaning of "patrol activity," "raids" and "artillery fire," often announced in communiques. Such activities are not intended to produce any decisive result. Perhaps their main object is psychological.

Troops allowed to hold their position passively undoubtedly tend to become inert, bored and either weary or excited. Active and enterprising is the best cure.

In addition the training value of patrolling and minor operations is very great. This may sound a hard and dangerous doctrine, but the lessons learned save life in the end.

It is another example of patrol activity and raids. Information is required of enemy points. Much of that information can only be got by capture of prisoners. It is for instance important to know what positions are holding the position and the nature of the enemy's equipment. That is an indication of the strength of the troops holding the line and the numbers involved.

Another view from one part of the front to another or their withdrawal to reserve gives valuable notice of enemy intentions. Information that shows light on the vigilance and state of morale of the troops.

Artillery activity may be to cover patrols or raids, or it may be merely harassing fire intended to inflict loss of equipment. Information is taken place in movement without cover.

By the use of the artillery activity is, however, merely for registration of the exact range of points, thus enabling accurate fire to be opened at short notice when required.

Game Preservation

New Style Of Shot To Overcome Lead Poisoning Of Ducks

Canadian conservationists are watching with interest research work being carried on at the University of Minnesota, which is demonstrating the seriousness of the danger to waterfowl from lead poisoning caused by swallowing spent shot. Studies of shallow-water areas that have been heavily shot over showed that a large number of ducks, varying in age from young to old, died from the bottom that they duck feeding there could easily swallow a lethal dose of shot in a short time. Similar studies of other areas that were once the scene of much hunting but are now waterfowl sanctuaries show that after a number of years, varying with local conditions, lead shot on the bottom become covered with sufficient vegetation and other debris to prevent the ducks from obtaining them when feeding.

Once the lead pellets are swallowed by the ducks they remain in the alimentary tract until they are greatly reduced by the acid in the duck's digestive fluids. In the meantime, the lead from the shot affects the bird's blood, muscles, nerves and internal organs, producing characteristic lead poisoning and often resulting in death.

Science not only points out this growing peril to wild ducks but is developing an adequate practical remedy. Shot made of a certain alloy of lead and magnesium, while just as suitable for use in hunting as ordinary lead shot, will not cause lead poisoning if swallowed by a duck because under the action of water or of the duck's digestive fluids it disintegrates rapidly. Thus, if swallowed, it passes in pulverized form through the duck's body before lead poisoning, which is a comparatively slow process, can occur. This lead-magnesium shot will soon be placed on the market in commercial quantities and by its use hunters will be able to avoid destroying, by unintentional poisoning, the very birds they wish to hunt.

Fins Named Russia

The Finns named Russia for the Swedes. A small colony was founded at the Dnieper by Swedish fishermen and the Finns called the colonists "Rushters." Later this became "Rus," and then "Russia," which meant slaves or seafarers.

Workers Get Good Meal

Shift In Government Arsenal Pay Small Sum For Lunch

Several hundred workers in a government arsenal in Canada eat a tasty, wholesome, full-course meal each day for 15 cents. It is served in a restaurant in the plant and is only one of many attentions paid to the health of the workers. This restaurant works like clockwork. The workers have to travel miles each day to and from their homes by special train. So only half an hour is allotted to the lunch break. Of this 10 minutes is required for washing and a brief rest. In the remaining 20 minutes the meal is served.

Spotless kitchens, equipped with the latest appliances for large-scale health cooking, make it possible to keep food costs down to 10 to 12 cents for each individual meal. The margin of three cents or more covers replacement of broken crockery and worn-out cutlery. Here is a typical menu: Soup, corned beef and cabbage, potatoes, apple pie, tea or coffee.

Men and women eat in separate dining rooms. About six women are employed for every man. A radio in the wall between the two dining rooms provides music during the meal.

When the plant was opened the low-cost meal was decided upon in order to dissuade the workers from bringing lunches, which might or might not be sufficient. It was an immediate success.

The meal is served on long bare wooden tables and the diners sit on benches. At each table one person is designated as a sort of trouble shooter and gets a few cents extra a day for reporting complaints and checking on grievances. Thus if any one has a complaint about the food it is made at once. If there is something wrong it is corrected.

Copper Going To Russia

British Columbia copper is being shipped in large quantities to Russia, provincial mine officials said. They explained that copper from some British Columbia mines goes to Tacoma, Wash., where it is smelted and then goes into the world market. Canadian government regulations do not control re-exports.

Greece is shipping more goods to the United States than elsewhere.

Little Change Has Been Made In Basic Principle Of Fighting In The Air

Air fighting, in spite of the pre-war prophets, seems to remain just the same now as it used to be. When Allied and enemy airplanes meet they behave exactly as they did 21 years ago.

Personally I think that there are certain basic manoeuvres which will remain as long as there is such a thing as air fighting. Some people imagine that when two airplanes fight they indulge in loops and rolls and tumbles and all kinds of complicated acrobatics. Acrobatics are used; but the basic manoeuvre—now as in 1918—is the ordinary steadily turning. Air fighting consists of banking turn. When the machines meet they swing immediately into a turn. They keep turning and turning until one gets a sight on the other.

Turning is often the beginning and end of an air fight; but it is not the end of a special kind, and it subjects the pilots to terrific strains. Those strains, just like the tactics, are the same as they were in the earlier war.

The other day I was visiting a fighter squadron in France. I saw a pilot who had just been shot down by a German machine and it was really extraordinary the way he behaved. He told me seemed to be an echo of my own experiences in many of the combats I had taken part in in the earlier war. There is no doubt that the basic methods of air fighting are unalterable.

And the physical strains are much the same because, although the pilots of the earlier war were moving at only about a third of the speed of the pilots of this one, they were subject to the same accelerations, or to the same loads, as one might say. Those loads are illustrated by the old business of swinging a bucket full of water over the head. The centrifugal force keeps the water in the bucket. And the faster you swing the bucket the more they will be crushed down until they finally feel as if they will be forced to fly out through the top of the fuselage. They may be held down with two, three, four, or five times the force of the force of the fuselage. They may be turning at 300 miles an hour. The machines of 1918 may have been turning at only 100 miles an hour. But the pilot may have just the same load on him because the tightness of the turn—that is, the radius of the turn—is different. A machine turning at 300 miles per hour with its pilot weighing two-and-a-half times as much as a pilot weighing 150 pounds would be sweeping and circling on a thousand-yard radius. If one of the old machines, flying at only 100 miles an hour, were to be turned on a radius of about 20 yards, the pilot would weigh the same amount—that is, two-and-a-half times his ordinary weight.

In other words, the two pilots, while turning, would be pressed down in their seats in the same way and would feel just the same sort of effect. It's a most unpleasant effect. The head is pressed down and the body is forced down between the shoulders. If one could sit still and add light, it would not be so bad. But it is essential to watch the enemy and so the head must be turned and tilted. And every time the head is tilted it feels as if it will be snapped off.

If two machines of equal maneuverability meet in a tight turn, turning may go on for a long time. It leaves the pilot feeling rather as if he had just been put through a steam thrashing machine.

The turning technique is seen at its most intense when fighter meets fighter. When the same basic manoeuvre appears when fighter attacks bomber. If you ever happen to see a fighter attack a bomber, you will see the enemy bomber start to turn directly the fighter comes within range. It cannot play the turning game so long because it has got to get home, and that is one of its disadvantages. The bomber is a big machine, and it is a big target. The fighter is a small machine, and it is a small target. The fighter is a small machine, and it is a small target. The fighter is a small machine, and it is a small target.

Aerial combat is still fought by turning. And the machine that turns slightly better than the other, at a small radius or it may be made on a large radius at high speed; it is the machine that wins the battle. This is what victory usually goes to the machine which turns the best. —Major Oliver Stewart in the Listener (London).

Farm Prices

Farmers Must Be Given Chance To Place Industry On Solvent Basis

Manitoba farmers are eager to make their maximum contribution to the war effort but to do so effectively must have the chance to establish their industry on a solvent basis. Dr. Charles F. Pabst, chairman of the press relations committee of the Kings County Agricultural Society, said today.

"I do not consider that the price of our farmers are receiving today for any of their products can be regarded as 'war prices,'" he said. "Our farmers are substantially below the prices prevailing for considerable periods of the last war but they are naturally and properly concerned in the solvency of their industry and in a reasonable balance between the price of what they produce and what they have to pay. That balance does not exist today."

According to Dominion statistics the gross cash income of the Manitoba farmer had fallen from $10,028 in 1926 to $7,000 in 1937. The average farm price for the three prairie provinces had decreased from $2.14 in 1926 to the 1936-1937 average of $7.30.

As a result of the war, Canada's great wheat surplus had become a shortage. Dr. Pabst said that the assurance against starvation, H. I. Griffin, statistician for United Grain Growers, Ltd., told the committee. The Dominion was left as the Allied only center source of wheat as long as the North Atlantic route was kept open.

There was little likelihood of Canada producing too much wheat as long as the war lasted for any one of the reasons. It would be required to supply the Allies. Dr. Pabst said that the war would be a great help to the farmer. It would be a great help to the farmer. It would be a great help to the farmer.

Katherine Lennox, head of the children's bureau of the U.S. department of health, said today that the report of a White House conference on children a year ago illustrating a shoeless land, has found a supporter. Stories Of Atrocities

Unbelievable Brutalities Are Reported From Poland

The Polish government in exile is plotting together a story of atrocities in the German-occupied portion of Poland which it claims are more than the most barbarous treatment of a conquered people in history.

In its series of "white papers," which are being issued periodically and are to be assembled in a book later, the Polish government describes the land that has been turned as one of hunger, stark fear, wrecked churches and hospitals, and executions. It says despite the fact that the population are conducted with methodical brutality.

A similar paper was issued by the Polish envoys to Italy and the Vatican.

Tales of atrocities and suffering also are reported from parts of Poland which had fled to Soviet Russia, but the papers deal mostly with the part held by Germany.

The Poles declare the papers contain only information which has been carefully investigated and verified, including an estimate that the German have executed 15,000 Poles of all classes.

At Bydgoszcz alone, the papers say, 6,000 persons had been shot down by the close of 1939, three months after Germany conquered the country.

As an example, one paper says the Bydgoszcz mayor, a Mr. Barczewski, "was ordered to deliver the automobile of the Gestapo (German secret police) with his tongue. He protested and was brutally beaten up and later shot to death."

The paper adds that "shortly after the Germans took Bydgoszcz 5,000 men, among them many priests, were shot up in the cavalry regiment stables in Gdansk city."

"They were so packed that they had barely room to stand. They remained thus penned for six weeks. At night the prisoners slept one on top of another."

One Or The Other

It was so cloudy that the barrage balloons were invisible from the ground. An inquisitive old man, looking on, was frankly puzzled. "How do you know there's a balloon at the end of that rope?" he asked one of the men on duty. "The soldier cocked an eye skyward and replied:—

"If there ain't, then, lumme, I've done the blooming Indian rope trick."

Enemy Of Ships

Millions Of Dollars Spent To Clear Barmecides From Vessels

That a hostile enemy of ships, the barmecide, is helping Britain's navy to "throttle" that of Germany. Admiral Sir E. Vanebo, who retired from the navy recently after completing his active career by serving nearly three years as commander of the British fleet, said that Germany's navy would be throttled slowly but surely because the barmecide is a "poisonous" enemy of ships and is reconditioning. He added that the pocket battleships and raiders have secret rendezvous with supply ships but their speed and effectiveness are lowered constantly by ordinary wear and the old trouble of bottom fouling.

Dr. Claude E. Zo-Bell, microbiologist of the University of California, said that the United States Government spends between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 annually to remove barmecides from the hulls of its ships. Litters such as the Normandy and the Queen Mary need a cleaning once a year at a cost of $100,000, he said, and marine growths may slow up a ship as much as 50 per cent.

Barmecides cannot live in fresh water, and so ships sometimes enter fresh water harbors, such as that at Seattle, for the purpose of removing the unsavory growths. That helps but scraping is the only method which completely rids a vessel's bottom of barmecides. —New York Sun.

recreational convention. However, he accepted the nomination on the basis of receiving complete independence on all matters affecting the agricultural, coal mining and other phases of industrial life of the Bow River riding, and his acceptance of the Liberal nomination on this basis was approved one hundred per cent at the nominating convention.

While Mr. Claypool will deal with national issues as the election campaign progresses, he feels that Alberta and the West have a lot of very important problems in its agricultural industry which must be solved. If the West is to play its proper part in the life of the Canadian nation, both during the present war period and the period following the close of the war, some of these problems are the production of wheat, hogs, cattle and other products of the farm, their methods of sale and the ultimate price to the producer, which should be on a parity with the price level of the things the producer has to buy.

Mr. Claypool is a well-informed, energetic and very sympathetic supporter of the Bracken committee on Agriculture and very sympathetic to the work of the Bracken committee have done and will do in the best interests of West in Canada and Canadian agriculture.

The Liberal candidate has always been a staunch advocate of greater markets for Alberta, and Canadian goods within Canada itself, while his long association with the Carbon and Drumheller parts of the Bow River riding has given him a keen insight into the needs of Alberta's great domestic coal industry. He has been following the work the National Coal Committee has been doing along the lines of the extension of markets for Canadian coal and is in complete accord with their aims and objects, while, if elected, he will lend every support to the movement for greater markets for Alberta and Canadian coals. He is a firm believer in freight rates on coal which will allow the industry to expand, thus affording this great Alberta and Canadian industry a much greater measure of employment.

Mr. Claypool is no stranger to the needs of the Bow River riding, apart from agriculture and coal, and he can be counted upon to lend his energies toward accomplishing things for the benefit of those engaged in other phases of activity.

Money To Be Made

Word had been passed round that the Commanding Officer had offered him $5 for every German shot. That night, Pat Murphy, the look-out, ran silently to his sleeping friend. He shook him, "Sah," he whispered, "Don't wake the others, Bill. Just grab your rifle and come with me. There's fifty thousand of them blighters coming over the top."

Then They Heard

Three slightly deaf men were not phases of activity.

According to Mr. Claypool his 20 years spent in public life in Alberta, and a much longer period as a resident of Alberta and a student of the needs and problems of the West, proves that too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that Western Canada with its small population cannot afford to continue isolating itself politically by forming new parties and sending representatives of those parties to Ottawa and thus deprive the West of a voice in formulating policies that affect every man an woman in the West.

It was for this reason Mr. Claypool re-aligned himself with the Liberal party and as the Liberal candidate for the Bow River riding, with the independent attitude outlined at, and accepted by the Liberal convention as his guide, he is appealing to all classes of people throughout the Bow River riding for their support and, if elected, he will, as has been the case during the twenty years he served as a member of the Alberta legislature be truly representative of all people of the Bow River riding.
